

My Self- Reflection Report Card

Help students take ownership of their learning!

This student-friendly report card was designed for use at parent-teacher conferences, or at the end of each term when you send home report cards with your students. Help students take ownership of their learning by completing this self-evaluation form and set some goals for the upcoming term.

 Please note, there are two versions of each page - the only difference on the first page is the self-evaluation options for reading (awesome, okay, and needing improvement, OR comparisons using animals: fast, bumpy, and slow). On the second page, the only difference is the homework option - one evaluates how often they DO their homework, and the other evaluates how often they actually RETURN their homework (this is a huge issue in my classroom... many kids DO their homework, but it never finds its way back to my classroom!)

My students LOVE making their own report card during parent-teacher conferences; I make one copy for my files, and one copy for the students to take home (many of them find it fun to color it too!)

Subjects include: reading, writing, math, listening & following directions, homework, and doing my best. As this is a freebie, I do not have time to add extra subjects. Thanks for stopping by my store to grab this freebie ☺
